Field of the Invention This invention relates generally to the field of semiconductor memory devices and more particularly to a method of operating a phase change memory device. 2. Description of the Related Art Phase change memory devices use phase change materials, i.e., materials that may be electrically switched between a generally amorphous and a generally crystalline state, for electronic memory application. One type of memory element utilizes a phase change material that may be, for example, a chalcogenide alloy which includes an element from Group VI of the Periodic Table of Elements. The phase change materials are changeable between the amorphous and crystalline states. The state of the phase change materials is also non-volatile in that, when set in either the crystalline, semi-crystalline, amorphous, or semi
