You can have a shader which contains a code which is reading something from a database. Thus, a shader could have one entry (the code) and more entries (the database query). To avoid the leading zeros in the number, you could encode it by replacing the first and the last letter (so, the leading zeros) by the number of letters you have between them

Oct 18, 2012 Category:File sharing networksMowin' Windows Mowin' Windows is the debut studio album by American rock band The Minus 5, released through Interscope Records in August 1999. The album's title and artwork reference a cat and window, respectively, and it is often referred to as Mowin' Windows and Mowin' Windows. The album received praise from critics upon its release. It reached the top 30 in the United States, Japan, and the Netherlands. The lead single "Weirdo" reached number 11 on the Billboard Modern Rock Tracks. Background Mowin' Windows was recorded at Sunset Sound Recorders in Los Angeles, California and produced by Brian Deck. The album was recorded with a rhythm section featuring drummer Bob Sheehan and bassist Michael Cavanaugh. The Minus 5's name comes from a phrase commonly used for an unsuccessful attempt to fix something. The album's lead single, "Weirdo", was influenced by singer-songwriter Elliott Smith. The song features Tom Petty-esque guitars and piano, and the song's chorus features a similar singing style to Petty's "American Girl". Release and reception The album was released through Interscope Records on August 12, 1999. Upon release, Mowin' Windows reached the top 30 in the United States, Japan, and the Netherlands. A live rendition of the song "The Animal", recorded during the album's recording sessions, was released as a single. Critical reception of the album was positive. Writing for AllMusic, Stephen Thomas Erlewine gave the album a four and a half out of five stars. Erlewine praised the album's production and praised its alternative rock sound and favorable lyrical content. Mowin' Windows was named the best independent album of 1999 in Q magazine's Readers' Poll. Track listing All songs written by Jack Douglas, except where noted.
