The game is set in 1947 Los Angeles, the dawn of the atomic age, and the time of an incredible crime wave. Gameplay The game is based on a series of point-and-click investigations, involving a total of six different cases. Each investigation requires the player to use the game's many in-game techniques, in order to gather evidence and find clues to solve the case. The game allows the player to complete these cases in any order. The cases are in chronological order, with the first one being the investigation of the murder of a young girl, and the last one being the arrest of a killer. The cases are set in six different districts, all of which are "located" in the City of Los Angeles. Each district is connected to each other through a number of different buildings, including the police department, the coroner's office, the media, the mayor's office, and the court house. The districts are: South Central, San Fernando Valley, Hollywood, Koreatown, Boyle Heights, and Wilshire. All of these districts can be visited at any time. The district of the murder can be visited at any time. The district is the game's main setting. At any given time, a player can visit the district's police station and court house to search for clues or for the suspects, who are usually at the police station. Each district has two types of police officers: patrol officers and detectives. The patrol officers are there to maintain order in the district and respond to crime. The detectives are there to look for clues to solve the crime. As a detective, a player is able to access the district's crime scene to look for clues, such as blood stains, fingerprints, and other items. As a detective, the player can interrogate suspects, but also can watch them in their cell to see if they are being truthful. The player can also search for evidence in the district's storage room. When a player is able to gather enough evidence, the game will end and the player will receive a score based on the number of clues and suspects that they found. The player's goal is to solve the case and bring the murderer to justice. The player can choose to "run" to any location in the district that the player wants to visit. Each location has a different effect on the case. A visit to the police station will cause a crime to be committed in the district, if the player has not solved the case yet. The player will have to investigate
