I should make sure to share some of the great work I've been doing as well. But, mostly what I want to share is a song that has been keeping me company during the last month or so of being on my own for the first time in about 8 years, staying in a place that had lots of room and was relatively quiet and still. My name is Ross Farrar and I'm the singer, songwriter, and guitarist for the trio Clarity West. We have been around for a few years now, but I'm only just starting to understand what we do a little more clearly as we begin to play more shows. This is my first time posting anything I've written. I hope you enjoy it and that you can find a way to come see us sometime. Shepard Fairey, in another powerful remix, gives us the track "Losing Tomorrow" from the self-titled debut album from Portland, Oregon's Clarion West. In addition to the track that originally appeared on the record, this remix also features remixes by The Weeping Choir, P.O.S., and Fatty Gainz. We've been playing some of our stuff lately at the North Shore Music Festival in Chicago. Check out a couple of videos and see what we've been doing and what we're about. Hope you enjoy and get to see us out on a big stage soon.Q: What kind of tax does a head of household pay? I'm currently working as a software engineer and planning to file as self-employed. My earnings are going to come from two sources: direct contract, and consulting/contracting. What I'm confused about is: I can't charge more than a standard rate set by my state, so a freelance engineer will
