TRADITIONAL CATHOLIC WOMEN By Kate Kelleher This fascinating, readable, and surprisingly in-depth look at Roman Catholic women makes a case that the next millennium will be a time for women to flourish in the Church and help her to grow even further. Based on the author's experience as a Catholic women's leader and a history of women in the Church, this highly readable book suggests ways in which women can take a deeper and more active role in the faith in the coming century. Chapter One: "The Church Needs a Revolution" The Church is going to have to change or die. The author gives her credentials as a woman of faith, who has worked in the Church for 40 years. Her points of emphasis include: Women must be given a greater voice in the Church, particularly as pastors. This will lead to a more balanced approach to the masculine-feminine roles in the Church.
