A new cost-effectiveness analysis for the treatment of chronic hepatitis B with nucleos(t)ide analogs. We performed a cost-effectiveness analysis of the treatment of chronic hepatitis B with pegylated interferon (Peg-IFN) alfa-2b plus lamivudine (LAM) or LAM monotherapy using the validated, Markov, and cost-effective model Hepavirus Model, to evaluate the cost per quality-adjusted life-year (QALY) of those treatment regimens. All results were obtained by applying a 1-way deterministic sensitivity analysis to parameter estimates. Our analysis indicates that, from a health care payer's perspective, Peg-IFN alfa-2b + LAM is cost-effective in the treatment of chronic hepatitis B. In addition, Peg-IFN alfa-2b + LAM and LAM monotherapy are both dominant over no treatment. In terms of cost per QALY gained, the most cost-effective regimen was Peg-IFN alfa-2b + LAM. The robustness of our results was demonstrated in the sensitivity analysis. We found that the costs of Peg-IFN alfa-2b + LAM are similar to those of LAM, while the QALYs gained by Peg-IFN alfa-2b + LAM are significantly higher than those of LAM. Q: Not all files when using fork() I have a problem with my C program. It's function is: pid_t fork() { pid_t cpid; char buff[BUFSIZ]; printf("I'm calling fork. I have returned pid = %ld ", (long int) getpid()); cpid = fork(); if (cpid == 0) { // kid printf("I'm child and my pid is %ld
