company of heroes tales of valor 2.500.0.127 7 trainer.25Effects of acid-base changes on perinatal mortality of triplets and twins. The relationship of the acid-base status to the perinatal mortality rate of triplets and twins was investigated.
Mean arterial blood pressure, heart rate, plasma pH, and bicarbonate concentrations were measured in mothers and in their newborns immediately after delivery in 164 triplet and 158 twin deliveries. Mothers who had triplets and twins delivered had an anion gap (a-G) higher than normal. These mothers had slightly higher plasma pH and bicarbonate concentrations than mothers of singletons. The total perinatal mortality rate was 4% in triplets and 7% in twins. It was similar in triplets and twins ($P = .7$). High a-G was more common in mothers of triplets and twins than in mothers of singletons (9% vs 0% and 8% vs 3%, respectively, $P = .4$)
