This can easily be done by clicking the Replace... button, select the option Replace All in all open document windows, and selecting the string that is located in the element from the Element search box. One of the advantages of the macro tool is that it doesn't need to be activated in order to work. It can run quietly at any time. It has been developed by the Electronic Frontier Foundation to protect users from Web threats like malwares, trackers, adware, click-jacking, and other unwanted Web content. The extension makes use of its own user-agent string to determine whether to allow a page. If it is not matched by the user-agent string, users are presented with a message explaining the risks and the risks can be declined if they want. Otherwise, if the user-agent string matches, the page is allowed to load. On top of this, NoScript also offers user customization, allowing users to define the types of files that can be loaded. If users believe the file could be harmful, they have the opportunity to block it. This means that they will be informed of what it is, but it will not be loaded in the browser. This can be used to block scripts from being loaded and executed. KEYMACRO Description: A free and open-source browser extension for Firefox and Chrome.
