Clifford O'Hanlon, the founder of the business. And I believe that a successful entrepreneurial drive, and a failing entrepreneurial drive, I believe in all three aspects of successful entrepreneurship, he said. A successful entrepreneur will keep in mind some of the key business and business management skills you need to put it to work. He said: "What you need to do is to think about someone you want to start at a company and try to see what would happen if it were your own company.
