To evaluate the influence of glycemia and the duration of diabetes on the lipid pattern in patients with type 1 diabetes mellitus. Cross-sectional study. A total of 174 Mexican type 1 diabetic patients. Eighty-nine patients were in good glycemic control and 85 in poor metabolic control. Plasma lipids, C-peptide, fasting and stimulated C-peptide, glycosylated hemoglobin, and body mass index. Clinical data were recorded. Plasma lipids were tested and C-peptide was determined, in fasted and stimulated conditions. In regard to triglycerides, total cholesterol, LDL-cholesterol, C-peptide was lower in patients with poor glycemic control than in patients with good control. In the multivariate analysis, triglyceride levels were higher in patients with longer duration of diabetes. HDL-cholesterol was lower in patients
