REVE Virus Definitions (1.0) REVE Virus Definitions updates version 1.0 of the virus definitions for REVE Antivirus, Internet Security, Total Security, and optionally for other Antivirus applications as well. This tool enables automatic software update of the virus definitions, whilst ensuring that you are secure against the latest malware attacks. REVE is a freeware, Open Source, Anti-Virus solution that guarantees a safe, secure browsing experience on the Internet with a focus on the online community. REVE is available under the Open Source GPLv3 licence. Check Your Internet Connection If you click the Options button, you will open the Options window, where you can define a custom domain (optional) and select if you want to update the virus definitions automatically or not (both options are checked by default). If you have manually configured your Internet connection (wireless, modem etc.), you can go to the Check Your Internet Connection page for these settings. If your settings are updated automatically, you can either select to update all programs or a selected list of programs (including REVE, REVE Messenger, Rescue Reminder for BlackBerry and REVE Character Map) through the Download button. Please read the Check Your Internet Connection for any issues you might experience when checking your Internet connection. Manual Updates (default) This option updates all programs with no restrictions. It is not recommended to use this option for automatic updates, unless you plan on using automatic updating for other applications as well. Select Programs (optional) This option updates selected programs with no restrictions. It is not recommended to use this option for automatic updates, unless you plan on using automatic updating for other applications as well. REVE Virus Definitions Error The following error message is shown when you attempt to update: Unable to start service WUDPDC.exe. Service not responding. Check your internet connection. Check Your Internet Connection This error occurs when a connection to the Internet is not established and can be fixed. Please read the Check Your Internet Connection for any possible issues you might encounter. Download Virus Definitions (to be used with REVE) Please read the instructions for REVE first. All About Updates, Old vs New Version, what is the difference, Why Install Updates, What is Code, Size and which One is best for a home user or a small business All About Updates, Old vs New Version, what is the difference, Why Install Updates, What is Code, Size and which One is best for a home user or a small business. To ensure that your computer is up to date, security experts recommend that you should check for automatic updates on a regular basis. If you don't have a previous version of the software to refer to, you should read these few simple steps to help you make an informed choice. Let's look at the various types of updates available, and then understand why you need them. Best Security Antivirus What is a Virus? A Virus is a computer program that is designed to damage other programs on the computer. A virus can replicate itself by copying itself from one computer to another. Viruses can be identified by their ability to damage programs and by their intent to replicate. Viruses can also be identified by the methods they use to hide from antivirus programs. I should keep in mind that a virus might not be recognized as such if it doesn't damage programs. It might leave a file on your computer that looks like it came from the virus. Or it might try to send out messages to other computers. What is a Trojan? Trojan was originally defined as a back door built into the system that gave a remote control to hackers into your computer and allowed them to access it from any computer. To this day, a Trojan is usually defined as a virus that doesn't actually damage programs, but tries to hide itself and then spread itself to other computers. But as computer viruses have evolved, so have Trojans. What is an Adware? Adware is a program that is included on a site that you visit for free, but that you download along with a third-party program and is designed to spread itself from computer to computer. Most adware does this by redirecting you to a store, an auction, or a commercial website that you were not planning on visiting. What is a Worm? A Worm is a program that spreads itself from computer to computer without a command center. It is program that you download. A worm doesn't need a
