The power of the Internet has helped many people, including me. However, if the Net's tools don't fit your needs, you may end up being limited by lack of functionality. This can be solved with the help of a third-party tool like Windows Generator. Windows Generator is a program that can build your own Windows applications. You can use the program's built-in template system to create a user interface, and the program can be modified to your liking. What's more, it's a free tool, and you don't have to sign up with a credit card to download it. Windows Generator can be used to create applications for Windows 10, Windows 8, and Windows 7, so it is usable for older operating systems as well. The program includes a basic user interface, so it can be used without any coding skills, but you'll still need to learn them to build more advanced versions. Get ready for the basic version Windows Generator doesn't require a tutorial, so it doesn't take long to get acquainted with the interface. You can use the template system to add and move items to a main frame, and you can change the size and type of a task bar or navigation bar. In addition, you can alter the title bar, create pages for text input fields, and add buttons. You can also use the type of control panel, and you can add a date or time picker. To fill forms, you can add a list box and text boxes. Windows Generator is designed for a single interface, so you can view other applications side-by-side. The program is ideal for beginners, but you should be familiar with text, graphics, and CSS to build more advanced applications. Key features Windows Generator offers a plethora of features, such as: A simple, yet flexible user interface Multiple template systems Batch processing Storing user settings and data Build basic and advanced applications The program can be used to build Windows 10 applications, but it is compatible with previous versions as well. It is a free tool, so there's no reason to limit yourself to the basic version. On the down side The program doesn't allow for online or embedded database management, so you can't add settings and data to the software. The number of form components can be limited in the basic version, but you can add more by using the advanced template system
