On the other hand, you can download the old version and just keep it in your app folder, and you'll have it whenever you update your phone. Download the version you want to use. Unzip it. (Note: be sure that you unzip it somewhere other than your app folder). Go into the app folder in Explorer on your PC. If you're using Windows 8, open the start menu, type "explorer", and select the "explorer" tile. If you're using Windows 7, open the start menu and select the "My Computer" icon. Select "Windows Explorer" (looks like an inverted file directory) from the left hand pane of the window. Select the folder where you unzipped the app, and double click it. Copy the .apk file to your phone's app folder. Install the app on your phone. You'll find the app in the app folder on your phone, with a file named "Contacts.apk". I think the app should work after you've copied it to your phone.
