The best part is that it is weatherproof. A few weeks ago the weather hit us with a ton of rain. This included heavy periods of rain for several days in a row. I had to stay inside most of those days and the thought of going out to go for a... I hope that this helps! I used to have the same problem as you! Here's my solution: The original settings on my camera was: Panorama: 3 sec Tilt angle: 25 degree I changed all of them to 15 seconds and 100 degree. I also changed the shutter speed to 1/200. That did it! :) I had the same problem. I solved the issue by changing the lens onto the other side of the camera. Before I tried the change that, the lens was sideways. It wasn't tilting. Now I will sometimes get a tilted side (the image will just tilt sideways). Changing the lens side over it solved that! Thanks for the replies. I will try all of these things and let you know! I had the same problem and the camera had to be sent to repair. Hopefully my camera will work after that! I will let you all know. Thanks! Shoots a pretty good photo

Since Google (and its Android partner HTC) started supporting Nougat, I've found myself constantly surprised at the quality of the transition. In the past, Google used to recommend against flashing Nougat, but once it became available for everyone that recommendation changed. Now they really aren't finding many problems at all. You can take up to a week to fully transition to Nougat, but Google says that you will benefit after the transition is complete. Wednesday, December 2, 2016 One of my personal projects has been to gather all the components for the different development boards that I own and put them in one place. There is 3e33713323
